President's Message

Vince Gallicchio

The Board sincerely encourages representation from as many member chapters as possible at this year's annual meeting.

This year marks a milestone as your President as I conclude my second term leading this organization. At this year's meeting the gavel will be passed on to our new incoming President, Dr. William Frey from the University of Tennessee. We will all wish Bill much success as he takes over leadership of Alpha Eta.

I am pleased to report that the "health" of the organization remains viable. The organization remains the pinnacle of academic recognition amongst and for the allied health professions and importantly recognizes the contributions made by academic programs that cut across the vast sea of academic levels, whether these academic programs represent two-year, four-year, or academic health science centers. New chapters have come on board that have off-set the reduction seen in membership as the result of closures of allied health schools and/or colleges that has taken place across the country during the past several years. To equalize this decline, we have seen an increase in the membership in two-year schools. This, I believe, represents a growing arena whereby students wanting to enter the health professional fields have been able to do so. It will be interesting to see if this trend continues in the years ahead.

As I have had time to reflect on my last President's Message to the organization, it is always important to reflect on the experience, especially in terms of trying to answer the question, "Have I made a difference?" Over the past four years there have been many changes both in my personal and professional life that have influenced where I am today. Two years ago, I changed institutions and, in fact, shifted from the day to day task of dealing with allied health as a cadre of academic disciplines with an emphasis focusing on a specific college with respect to graduate education and research. Now I focus on the responsibility of administering significant areas of the total research enterprise for an entire university. Health Education and Research is just one of six academic and research areas of interest that I must be attentive to now on a daily basis. It has been a very positive transition and welcomed change.

In reflecting over the past four years, I am very proud of the accomplishments made to date. Importantly, the main achievement lies in the awards structure of the organization. The clear distinction in making a difference lies directly with the establishment of the "Lee Holder Award for Excellence in Graduate Allied Health Education". Several years ago it had become quite evident that with the plethora of graduate programs that were being implemented across the academic disciplines in allied health, there needed to be a distinct award established in order to recognize the outstanding contributions made by graduate students in this area. At the time, the organization only had the Rodenberg Award as a mechanism to acknowledge outstanding academic achievement by a graduating allied health student. Because the original intent of this award was to acknowledge an undergraduate student, the growing trend of graduate programs amongst the allied health disciplines was now reflected in the large number of applications for this award being submitted by graduate students. Therefore, the original intent of the Rodenberg Award was lost. Thus, this situation needed to be addressed. In my judgment the best way to remedy this situation was to establish a new award specifically to acknowledge the ever-growing participation and contributions made by graduate students in allied health. By naming it in honor of Lee Holder was important because the organization as we know it today would not be Alpha Eta without Lee's tireless work and dedication to the organization. I wish to take this opportunity to personally thank Lee for all of he did to help and assist me in transitioning into as well as guiding me through the President's position. I wish Lee all the best as he now approaches the time when he officially retires from the Alpha Eta. Anyone who has worked or been involved with Alpha Eta and worked with Lee will miss him.

We no doubt will have another excellent set of applicants for this year's awards. At our annual meeting we will acknowledge both the Rodenberg Award and the Lee Holder Award recipients. I look forward to meeting these outstanding graduates when they are presented to accept their individual award for academic excellence at this year's meeting.

In closing, it has been a pleasure to serve this organization both as your President and as a Board Member. I have little doubt that the organization will continue to grow under the tenure of the new incoming president; Alpha Eta will continue to flourish.

Respectfully yours,

Vincent Gallicchio

The Secretary/Treasurer's Farewell Message

There comes a time in every man's life when he should move on. My time has come to step aside as secretary/treasurer of this Society. As I look back over the 32 years of the Society, I am proud to have been a part of it.

First, we should thank Howard Suzuki (dean at university of Florida) for getting us started. The Alpha Eta Society was started in 1975. It was recognized that allied health was a new concept for colleges throughout the country. We needed a way to recognize excellence in education and Alpha Eta was one way. We now recognize superior scholarship among undergraduate and graduate students with annual awards. Likewise we recognize outstanding chapters in universities.

We now have 64 chapters in colleges and universities throughout the U.S., and have 14,701 members. We continue to add chapters and a few chapters have become inactive.

I have been privileged to have been a part of the life of the Society since its inception. I served as second president 1979 and again in 1991-93. Since 1995, I have served as secretary/treasurer.

Now it is time that I step aside to give the opportunity to others to serve the Society. I appreciate having had the opportunity to serve and will follow your progress in the future.
